

Maersk unveils new-look boxship

Sam Chambers • October 10, 2023 1 760 Less than a minute

Maersk has revealed the design of its new-look series of 16,200 teu methanol-fuelled ships which feature the accommodation at the bow and no islands along the vessel.

The first in a series of 12 methanol-enabled containerships made its launching and undocking milestone over the weekend. The ship is under construction at HD Hyundai Heavy Industries and will deliver in 2024.

Last month Maersk held a high-profile naming ceremony for the Laura Maersk, the world's first methanol-powered boxship, a feeder that is now working in the Baltic.

Maersk has taken the lead with methanol orders. It also has contracted for a series of 9,000 teu ships and in total has 25 methanol-dual fuel ships set to join its fleet by 2027.

#Denmark

#Maersk

#South Korea

Comments

David Boffey

October 10, 2023 at 5:47 pm

Still ugly af.

Reply